I started creating In-App Advertising Solutions based on a specific idea to promote micro-tasks, jobs and other jobs. After a short time, my team and I grew so much that we created a cloud computing platform for micro tasks, jobs, reviews and ratings. We are waiting for you to be a part of our family! Social Networking: Facebook Twitter Google Facebook YouTube Instagram TwitterQ: If two groups of vectors in $\mathbb{R}^3$ are linearly independent, then how do I show that these vectors are not proportional? I'm having some difficulty in solving this question. Here's the question: Let V be a 3-dimensional vector space over the real numbers. Let $\{v_1,v_2,v_3\}$ and $\{w_1,w_2,w_3\}$ be two bases for V. Suppose that the columns of the matrix $A=[v_i^T, w_j^T]$ are linearly independent. Show that no matrix $\pmatrix{a & b \\ c & d}$ can be an invertible linear transformation from V to V. I'm thinking, this could be solved by showing that since the column vectors of A are linearly independent, then I can just take the inverse of the matrix and the first column of that is $c=0$, which tells me that the second column of that matrix is $b=0$. And I can do the same thing with the second and third column, to get that $a=0$ and $d=0$. Is my thinking right? A: I think your answer is not quite right. To get the basis vectors v_1,v_2,v_3 you need to normalize the vectors, e.g. by dividing each component by its norm $||v_i||$. This way the columns of A are indeed linearly independent but are not normalized. Then by the "rank-nullity-theorem" $rank(A)=rank(A^T)=3-rank(A^T)=3-0=3$ and, because A^T must be invertible, $rank(A^T)=1$ because the second column of A^T is trivial. Thus the matrix A has
